ERA defeated

WASHINGTON (AP)—The House, on a 278-147 vote that fell six short of the required two-thirds majority, rejected on Tuesday a proposed revival of the Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution.

The tally overrode impassioned pleas of the Democratic leadership and followed last-minute threats by special interest groups on both sides to judge lawmakers at the ballot box next year solely by their votes on the issue.

Voting for the ERA were 225 Democrats and 53 Republicans, while 109 Republicans and 38 Democrats opposed it.

The amendment, which reads simply that "Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex," has twice cleared Congress but fell three votes short of ratification — with 38 needed by last year's deadline.

The ERA went down this time after Republicans assailed the Democratic leadership for trying to shortcut the legislation without giving members a chance to amend it and with only 40 minutes of debate.

The lawmakers rejected a final appeal by House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who urged support for the ERA without an anti-abortion rider "in fairness to the women of America."

Rep. Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., said after the vote that he would reintroduce the ERA and seek to have it considered later this week under a rule permitting full debate on amendments.

The spectator galleries were nearly filled with supporters of women's groups favoring the ERA, and backers of anti-abortion organizations opposing it without the rider. Lobbyists for both sides worked furiously in the final hours in their attempts to sway votes.

Until O'Neill approved the shortcut, Rep. F. James Sensenbrenner, Jr., R-Wis., stood ready to introduce an amendment that would have ensured continuation of laws restricting government financing of abortions to cases where a woman's life is endangered.

UConn student dies in crash while speeding on N. Eagleville

By John Paradis
Assignments Editor

Mark Deluca, 19, a sophomore resident of Hartford Hall, died early yesterday morning after the pickup truck he was driving crashed into a utility pole on North Eagleville Road.

State police said Deluca was spotted by a university police officer at 2:07 a.m. after driving through a red light at the corner of North Eagleville Road and Hillside Road.

Deluca in an 1983 Dodge pickup truck, "fled west on North Eagleville Road at a high rate of speed leaving the officer behind," state police said.

Deluca continued west for just over a mile until the intersection of Bone Mill Road where he failed to make the hair-pin curve and crashed into a utility pole.

The state police officer who handled the call was unavailable for comment but state police said the university police officer did not pursue Deluca.

University police Lt. Michael Pander said that "given the nature of a road, the weather, the number of pedestrians and traffic along the road and the speed of the vehicle" it is up to the offocer whether to pursue a vehicle.

Pander would not say, however, what qualifications the university police officer used to not pursue Deluca. Pander

New Britain:

Voting machine may've malfunctioned

HARTFORD (AP) — The lawyer representing the apparent loser in New Britain's disputed mayoral election told a judge Tuesday that statistics support his claim that a voting machine may have malfunctioned.

"Unless you order the machine opened, no one will ever know if there was a mistake," said J. Brain Gaffney, attorney for Republican mayoral contender Michael T. Kozlowski, the apparent loser by 84 votes in last week's balloting.

But James A. Wade, the attorney for the apparent victor, incumbent Democratic Mayor William J. McNamara, argued that before the judge could order the machine reopened for examination by a mechanic, Gaffney had to prove that a properly functioning machine would have changed the outcome of the election.

He also said Gaffney should be required to bring in as witnesses enough people who voted for Kozlowski on that machine to prove it wasn't properly recording votes for him.

At issue is voting machine No.2 at the Vance School in District I in New Britain.

Gaffney brought to the witness stand Town Clerk Richard T. Murphy who testified before Superior Court Judge George W. Ripley that Kozlowski ran 100 to 125 votes behind the rest of the Republican slate on that machine.

On the two other machines at the Vance School, he said, Kozlowski ran ahead of virtually every other candidate on his slate.

Gaffney said he could show similar results on every other machine in the city, except the one in question.

He also said he could bring in voters who had difficulty with machine No. 2 at that school.

The judge said the witnesses would be helpful and he continued the case until 10 a.m. Wednesday.

But Wade argued that not all voters vote for mayor.

Cockroach situation 'quite bad' in Jungle

By Ron Eckert
Campus Correspondent

Cockroaches continue to pester North campus resident halls this year despite efforts to exterminate them, according to Rich Rossi, area coordinator, who described the situation as "quite bad."

Cockroaches have been frequently seen in both the cafeteria and the resident halls. "In the cafe, you see them at a couple of meals a week," said an R.A. who wished not to be identified.

Although their average size is about an inch, one student said, "We caught one last year that was two inches."

The cockroaches are found mostly in bathrooms and places where there is garbage or food. "They like to hide in empty beer cans," said one student.

Some students say the insects travel through the heating system but most agree that the bugs are "just there."

The buildings are very hot and damp in the winter and this attracts the insect, another R.A. said. Cracks and holes at the base of the walls give them places to hide and breed.

The university fumigates the buildings when the students aren't there. They also "spray weekly in the rooms if it is requested," Rossi said.

Though bad, this year's infestation is no worse than previous years. "The condition has been more or less the same for the last four years," said a senior resident.

Weather

Today will be rainy with highs in the 40s. Showers tonight with lows in the 30s.

Then plant a Victory Garden

As American cruise missiles arrived in Great Britain amid tremendous protests, President Reagan sent word to the Soviets in Geneva that the United States was willing to cut missile deployment in Europe. He challenged the Soviets to do the same.

The Reagan policy is not the issue here. What is of concern is a world that must turn its manufacturing capacities away from the military-technological. Wassily Leontief, Nobel Prize laureate and Director of the Institute for Economic Analysis at New York University stated in a recent interview with ILO Information: "Technology influences our entire lives by imposing its demands on the structure of the economy and the society in which we live and thus, in one way or another, it is bound both to 'imprint' and to reflect our cultural outlook and moral values." There will be significant impacts on the economies of the industrial nations if missile deployment is cut, despite the obvious need for arms control.

Statistics concerning employment in arms manufacture and deployment are scarce, but approximately 51 million people are employed in these capacities, according to Yves Sabolo, researcher for the International Labor Office. This United Nations affiliate has found that the yearly military expenditure for the world today is $600,000 million. The defense-related industries employ 32 million people in military and paramilitary capacities, four million in civil service, armament works employ 5.5 million jobs in four countries, the United States, France, Soviet Russia, and the United Kingdom.

The concentration of jobs in highly technological areas will be reduced through technological advancement. The change in opportunities due to computerization will crest in 30 to 50 years. We are beyond the Industrial Revolution, where physical strength was no longer a factor in industrialization ability. Computers will be able to do more than simple functions; they will be able to compute on a highly developed, quasi-mental level.

Leontief said of computerization: "We will soon be confronted with a choice between a situation where one part of the labor force is fully employed while the rest of it is completely unemployed, and on the other hand, a situation in which the employment opportunities are being spread evenly among all members."

If all nations involved in conscious disarmament laid careful groundworks for a balanced and gradual plan for utilization of the now available work force, there is strong reason to believe that society will benefit as a whole. Arms plants would have to be converted to peace-time activities, and employees would have to be restrained or relocated.

At this point, no involved nation has made any apparent steps toward these goals. Maybe they don't consider it a possibility yet.

Letters to the Editor

What Day After?

To the Editor:

For the past 38 years people have asked what will happen to us if there is a nuclear war? This prevailing question and the threat of annihilation through nuclear war has influenced entire generations, shaping our attitudes about the future, family, marriage, carreer decisions, time, leisure and certainly, death. It is this fear that all of us must come to terms with living in the nuclear age.

On Sunday, November 20, "The Day After" will be presented by the ABC Television Network. This fictional presentation will depict the effects of a nuclear strike on a community in Kansas City. The two-hour and fifteen minute drama that begins at 8 p.m. EST, will put viewers right in the middle of such devastation. Never before has there been such a movie on a major TV network and it's expected to be seen by over 50 million or more Americans.

A wide coalition of peace groups, churches, women's groups and other clubs are urging people to organize "watching together" meetings. This is important so that people can help share and process their feelings. Although the film will undoubtedly leave people feeling scared, shocked and angered, this is not the reason for watching it. It's absolutely necessary to be able to realistically acknowledge what this threat means in terms of our experience. We as human beings tend to avoid talking about our feelings, much less what we feel about being in a nuclear war. The mind and emotions deny contemplating the possibility of such a collossal tragedy. Such defenses allow us to feel safe and provide security but it's a false belief. Yet the universal fear of nuclear war so dominates our time that it cannot be avoided. It's time for nuclear man to come out of his stone-age repression and confront our feelings about this issue.

Watching this film and getting together with other students will help to acknowledge the peril and demonstrate we're all affected at some level. We need to express hope and understand that by confronting our fears we can transcend them. I hope you plan to watch the movie with friends.

As psychologist Robert Jay Lifton has written: "The vision of death gives life. The vision of total annihilation makes it possible to imagine living under and beyond that curse."

Steve Hinman

Disarmament as law?

To the Editor:

Many must feel as I often have--frustrated by the seemingly needless deaths of our young Americans in obscure places, and helpless in the drift of our country toward a nuclear catastrophe.

But lately I am feeling encouraged and not as helpless.

My reasons for hope is a resolution which has been introduced in the United States House of Representatives by Congressman Brown of California. It is called H. Con Res 123, and it provides for a verifiable freeze on nuclear weapons, for staged disarmament by all nations, and for inspections.

But it has something else that has been sorely needed. It provides for an international institution stronger than the United Nations with peace-keeping powers to which nations can submit their disputes without resorting to war.

We would not have to give up our sovereignty, and neither would any other nation. We could at last beat our swords into plowshares.

I urge every citizen to tell his/her elected representatives to support this resolution. Let's stop the madness, and give those who follow us a chance to live and work in peace.

Program Council to give input to WHUS

By Nancy Rank
Campus Correspondent

The university's radio station, WHUS, is organizing a programming council which will meet bimonthly to provide regular community input to the station's programming. It will allow the station to "strengthen the programming service to match community interest, a kind of fine tuning of the station," said John Murphy, general manager of WHUS.

The council will have 25 members, representatives of various university and community organizations, each serving one year terms. The station is welcoming any organizations "that have reason to want to work with the station," said Murphy.

The council will play a dual role in its service to the station. Beside keeping WHUS informed of community needs, it will also help promote the station to different groups. The organizations will receive publicity for their activities while making suggestions and criticisms about programming.

Murphy said the station encourages student involvement and hopes the council may help "foster internship opportunities and received input from departments" such as journalism, communications, and the media center.

According to Lee Cameron, WHUS programming director and a student at the university, in the past the station has gotten feedback from callers, letters, listeners, and the annual radiothon. While these will continue to be important to the station, the Programming Council will be the first attempt to create a group of representatives from the community.

The council is modeled after the Community Advisory Boards set up for each station affiliated with National Public Radio.

Center dedicated to Audrey Beck

By Jennifer Thilo
Campus Correspondent

The late Sen. Audrey Beck was honored yesterday by the newly organized Mohegan Community College women's center which was dedicated in her name.

"Beck is a role model for women; thoughout her career she introduced legislation which helped women," said Segal.

Beck introduced bills which gave women the right to change their names after a divorce. She also supported day care in the state and the Equal Rights Amendment.

Beck advocated a state income tax and funding for education during her tenure as co-chair of the legislature tax-writing committee and Senate Authority on fiscal policy.

Segal said "Beck's life illustrated the need for a women's center; she did not have the support and recognition she deserved."

Ronald Beck, the late senator's son, attended the ceremony yesterday and presented an exhibit chronicling his mother's life.

The exhibit, which will be on display for a month, consists of photos and quotations from the late senator, said Segal.

Cable TV bill criticized

By Jared Clark
Campus Correspondent

MANSFIELD — A bill that would limit local government regulation of cable television companies was criticized Tuesday by a spokesman for the Connecticut Department of Public Utility Control, who said it would "disallow Connecticut to order the companies to extend lines into outlying communities."

"It's not very profitable to extend service to sparsely populated communities, and if the companies can determine what areas they will serve, we're concerned that some communities won't get cable at all," said Louise Richard, speaking for the department.

District 53 state Rep. Michael Helfgott, chairman of the Cable Area Thirteen Committee, echoed her thoughts, saying cable TV deregulation would make line accessibility more difficult for some regions.

"If we let federal legislation deregulate the companies, we can just about forget cable TV in eastern Connecticut," he said.

The House of Representatives is considering a bill that would remove cable TV companies from local government regulation.

U.S. military attache killed in Greece

ATHENS (AP) — A gunman on a motorcycle fired seven bullets into the car of a U.S. naval military attache Tuesday, killing the officer and his Greek civilian driver.

Police said the killer and his accomplice who was driving the motorcycle escaped down a sidestreet of suburban north Athens after the morning rush-hour attack, which occurred as the car was stopped for a red light.

Capt. George Tsantes, 53, serving with the Joint U.S. Military Advisory Group, was hit by at least four bullets and died at the scene, police said. His driver died in a hospital.

A person who called an Athens newspaper said the "November 17" terrorists group was responsible for the murders.

That is the same group that claimed responsibility for the killing of the U.S. CIA station chief in Greece, Richard Welch, who was slain by masked gunmen outside his home on Christmas Day 1975.

A police spokesman said the anonymous caller telephoned the left-wing newspaper Eleftherotypia and said the terrorists would "explain the reasons for killing Tsantes in a file to be sent to Greek newspapers."

"November 17" is named for the date in 1973 that a student revolt was crushed by the military dictatorship then in power. The last acts attributed to the group were the killings of two right-wing police officers in 1976 and 1980. There have been no arrests for any of the murders.

Greece's Socialist government is marking the 10th anniversary of the student rebellion, which undermined the military regime, with celebrations throughout this week.

"There was blood everywhere inside the car. We hauled them out of the car but there was nothing we could do for the American," said Athens police officer Athanasio Zafirakis.

"A bullet below the heart probably killed him instantly," Coroner Haralambos Stamoulis said. "He also was wounded in the shoulder and abdomen."

The car's driver, Nikos Valoutsos, 62, died later in a hospital of bullet wounds in the chest, police said.

The U.S. naval officer, an American of Greek descent posted to Athens last spring, was driving to his U.S. Embassy office in downtown Athens from his home in the northern suburb of Kifissa, U.S. Embassy spokesman Peter Synodis said.

...House rejection

Sensenbrenner also planned to offer an amendment that would have prevented use of the ERA to draft women and send them into combat.

O'Neill said without the no-amendment rule, the anti-abortion forces would likely have won.

He told the House, "In fairness to women of America, the thing to do is send a lean, clean package" to the Senate. He told those saying they would vote against ERA because of the rule, "In your hearts you were never with us. You were looking for an escape."

Peter Rodino, D-N.J., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, said lawmakers should vote to end discrimination "in jobs, wages and pensions," and asked them to ignore Republican complaints about the rule preventing amendments.

Marilyn Lloyd, D-Tenn., accused her own party leadership of ignoring concerns that will be raised in state legislators.

O'Neill told reporters he scheduled the vote "at the insistence of women's organizations who want to find out who their friends are."

"That's the vote people are going to look at," Vice President Mary Jean Collins of the National Organization of Women said before the balloting. "NOW's political activity will be based at least partially on how people vote" on the ERA.

Doug Johnson, legislative director of the National Right to Life Committee, said, "I'm not prepared to say how exactly it's going to be defined with respect to individual candidates, but it's a weightier vote than a vote on the Hyde anti-abortion amendment, because it could invalidate all Hyde amendments, past, present and future."

The ERA passed the House in 1971 and the Senate in 1972.

Flynn wins

By The Associated Press

A white city councilman was elected mayor of Boston on Tuesday, defeating a black community activist.

Raymond Flynn, a Boston city councilor, received 104,129 votes or 66 percent compared to challenger Melvin King's 53,268 votes or 34 percent, according to unofficial returns from 201 of 252 precincts compiled by WBZ-TV.

Flynn's victory makes him Boston's first new mayor in 16 years, succeeding Mayor Kevin White, 53, who decided not to run again.

King, the first black to qualify for a Boston mayoral final, refused to concede and said it felt "wonderful to be part of a campaign, part of a group of people, who tried to make Boston whole."

Troops to pull out by Christmas

ST GEORGE'S, GRENADA (AP) — U.S. invasion forces will withdraw from Grenada no later than Christmas, the acting American envoy said Tuesday after five members of the Caribbean island's provisional government were sworn in.

"Everything depends on security," acting U.S. Ambassador Charles Gillespie told reporters following the swearing-in ceremony for five members of Grenada's nine-member governing council at the official government house. Four were unable to attend.

Gillespie also said U.S. troops would be out of the country "certainly by Christmas." He said the withdrawal would be "within the 60 days" required by the U.S. Congress, or earlier if Grenada's interim government requests it.

Before the invasion, Cuba had sent workers to build an airport, teach in schools and work in hospitals. The Reagan administration claimed the Cubans were plotting to seize control of the island. Cuba has strongly denied it.

Nicholas Braithwaite, acting chairman of the new council which will run the government until elections can be held in about six months, said the panel would begin "taking the administrative decisions of government."

"My first impression is that the financial situation will create great difficulties for us" in resuming some of the required programs and services for the Caribbean island of 110,000 people, Braithwaite said.

New proposal seeks to reduce acid rain

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp reduction in pollutants, paid for in part by a fee on consumer electric bills, was proposed Tuesday by New England congressmen as a way of curbing lake-killing acid rain.

Rep. Silvio O. Conte, R-Mass., a co-sponsor of the bill with Rep. Norman D'Amours, D-N.H., and Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said it recognizes that Midwestern utility customers cannot be expected to pay all the costs by themselves.

The fee of 15-hundredths of a cent on each kilowatt-hour of electricity, except nuclear and hydro power, would pay for 90 percent of the costs of installing scrubbers on coal-fired power plants to reduce sulfur dioxide emissions, Conte said.

The fee, he said, would raise electric bills on a national average by 81 cents a month. The bill would allow low-income families to seek exemption from the fee, which would be in effect from 1985 through 1995.

"Acid rain is an environmental timebomb ready to explode. The fuse is long and the timer is silent, but the explosion will be devastating and far-reaching," Conte said.

D'Amours told reporters at a news conference the plan would require a 12 million-ton reduction in sulfur dioxide emissions, a 50 percent cutback, by 1993.

The first phase would require a 6 million-ton reduction, primarily by forcing the top 50 highest emitting power plants to install scrubbers. The plan would allow states to swap plants, so long as the reduction would be equal and scrubbers were used.

The second stage would require a 5 million-ton reduction, but would allow states to pick and choose among different methods on how to achieve it. Methods could include switching to low-sulfur coal, more scrubbers or coal washing.

"This bill is fair, it's balanced, it's bipartisan," D'Amours said.

He said the requirement for scrubbers in the first phase would help preserve jobs in the Midwestern and Appalachian high-sulfur coalfields, while the option for coal switching in the second phase could provide a boost to the low-sulfur coal industry in the West.

Markey also said the electricity fee should help make the bill more palatable in the Midwest.

"The past four years have shown us that the principle of 'sticking it to the Midwest' is bad policy and bad politics," he said.

Conte said Midwesterners still may object to the bill, but it may be the best that region can get because of the cost-sharing provisions.

He said one reason the plan was unveiled now was to give Midwestern lawmakers a chance to discuss it back home during the December-January recess.

D'Amours said every New England congressman except Rep. Olympia J. Snowe, R-Maine, has agreed to co-sponsor the measure. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., is not a co-sponsor because the speaker traditionally does not co-sponsor bills.

D'Amours said because the Maine paper industry would be affected by phase two cleanup requirements, Mrs. Snowe wanted to talk personally with industry officials before signing on.

Many members of the New England delegation attended the press conference on the plan.

Those attending were Reps. Edward Boland, D-Mass., Sam Gejdenson, D-Conn., William Ratchford, D-Conn., Judd Gregg, R-N.H., Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., James Jeffords, R-Vt., Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Stewart McKinney, R-Conn.

Conte said while a separate bill was being introduced, the New Englanders would try to get their proposals through as amendments to an existing acid rain bill sponsored by Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif.

The Waxman bill, Conte said, called for a 10 million-ton reduction in sulfur dioxide, and did not include a cost-sharing plan.

Both plans also would require a 4 million-ton reduction in nitrogen oxide emissions.

Several congressmen said Congress should not wait for the Reagan administration to make its acid rain recommendations before acting.

"We can't just sit on our hands and wait for the administration," Ratchford said.

Conte said even though the Reagan administration has been cool to acid rain legislation, it might support the New England plan if it passed in Congress with a solid vote.

New book of poetry from Scully

Dr. James Scully has published a new book of poetry titled Apollo Helmet.

Scully, an English professor who specializes in creative writing says that while the work is about poetry itself, "it is political."

Rebecca Black of Curbstone Press the publishers, says, "for many years now James Scully, along with others, has been quietly radicalizing American poetry — in theory and in practice, in how it is lived as well as how it is written — and this new book is important not only in itself but as an indication of a necessary, healthy development in American letters."

Apollo Helmet is new, colloquial, crafted poetry which lashes our worst hypocrisies, making genuine freedom credible, according to Franklin Reeve, poet and editor of The Poetry Review.

Scully's new book has been selected by jurors at the 1983 New England Book Show, as one of the winners for book cover design. Scully also designed the cover.

A native of New Haven, Scully received both his bachelor and Ph.D. degrees from UConn. He has published five collections of poetry, and has translated numerous works. His poetry has appeared in diverse periodicals including The New Yorker, Praxis, Harvard Magazine and The Minnesota Review.

Jorgensen survey raffle winners announced

As part of its ongoing campaign to serve students, Jorgensen Auditorium has just completed a student awareness survey. The survey ran the week of October 16th with tables set up in the Student Union Lobby and the Library Plaza. Simultaneously, ten dorms were chosen at random to participate and surveys from these dorms are still forthcoming.

After completing the survey students were encouraged to fill out a raffle ticket that would entitle winners to a pair of free tickets to the performance of their choice through December. The following people from the Student Union and Library locations were chosen as raffle winners by Marie Gallo-Hall, Arts Editor for the Daily Campus:

John Rooney — Vinton House
Tony Gullith — Wheeler
Philip Forztey — Manchester, Ct.
Stephen Wonjnar — Sprague

Jorgensen Auditorium is anxiously awaiting the results of the survey and thanks everyone who participated.

Concert to celebrate German culture

The five-hundredth anniversary of Martin Luther's birth; the three-hundredth anniversary of German immigration to the United States; and the one-hundred-fiftieth anniversary of the birth of Johannes Brahms all will be commemorated in a concert Nov. 20 by the UConn Concert Choir and Chorale.

Those planning to attend the 4 p.m. performance should note that the concert, originally scheduled for von der Mehden Hall, will be held at the Storrs Congregational Church.

The Concert Choir, under the direction of Virginia Hancock, assistant professor of music, will perform "Selig sind die Toten" by Heinrich Schutz; "Lobet den Herrn, alle Heiden," by J.S. Bach; and "Fest- und Gedenkspruche, Opus 109" by Brahms. All of the texts come from Luther's translation of the Bible.

In addition, the Concert Choir will perform "Brevis" by Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina and the University Chorale, under the direction of Lorraine Cetto, lecturer in music, will perform "Gloria" by John Rutter.

These two pieces illustrate widely different stages in the history of settings of the Ordinary of the Roman Catholic Mass, according to Hancock and Cetto.

"Brevis," so named because of its relative shortness, is a four part setting of the second section of the Ordinary, first performed in 1974. Both pieces are in three movements.

Hancock, who joined the UConn music faculty this fall, holds degrees in chemistry from Reed College and Harvard University, and a doctorate in music history from the University of Oregon. Her book, Brahm's Choral Composition and His Library of Early Music, is scheduled for publication this month.

Cetto is in her second year as conductor of the University Chorale.

CBS back on top

LOS ANGELES (AP) — CBS left its rivals in the dust in the Nielsen ratings last week, leading the Top 10 with its ever-popular "60 Minutes" and "Dallas" and the first night of its touted miniseries "Chiefs."

CBS finished more than three points ahead of NBC and ABC, which tied for second place in the ratings for the week ended Nov. 13. It was the first time this season that NBC did not finish last.

Led by "60 Minutes," CBS' shows placed one through five in the Top 10. Ony three shows in the Top 10 were not CBS.

The victory for the seventh week of the fall season was a comeback for CBS, which fell behind ABC the previous week.

After "60 Minutes" was "Dallas" in a close second, and the opening chapter of the CBS miniseries "Chiefs" was third. The spillover into prime time of CBS' coverage of regional NFL football games tied for fourth with CBS' "Simon & Simon."

...Stern named NBA commissioner; will succeed O'Brien

University Law School, Stern has been an NBA executive since 1978 and became vice president for business and legal affairs in 1980.

He headed the NBA bargaining committee in contract negotiations with the players' union last spring and is considered an expert on the league's dealings with cable television.

Although Stern had been considered a front-runner for the post, the haste with which he was chosen was something of a surprise.

But O'Brien, who said he wanted an insider picked, had the item placed on the agenda for a Board of Governors' meeting called to discuss the referees' strike. When he proposed Stern, the owners quickly agreed, going through the entire selection process in less than half an hour.

"We wanted an orderly transition. The perception was that he was well-trained, knowledgeable and ready to step into Commissioner O'Brien's shoes," said Richard Bloch, owner of the Pheonix Suns.

Huskies to play Colgate

Football season ends Saturday

By Jim Acton
Staff Writer

"The seniors have an extra incentive to win this game, seeing it will be their last as college football players," Jackson said concerning the Huskies 1:00 p.m. contest against Colgate. "You remember your last game as a senior for a long time. We just want to go out with a winning season.

The Huskies are coming off an impressive victory over Rhode Island and could end the season with a 6-5 record with a win against Colgate. Colgate has a 7-3 record and defeated Richmond last week, 43-14. A UConn loss would mark the third straight year the team finished with a losing record.

The key to a Husky win will be the ability of the defense to stop the Red Raider's potent offense. Rich Erenberg, the Colgate tailback, enters the game requiring 183 yards to become only the third back in college football history to rush for 1,900 yards. The other two backs who have reached this total are Tony Dorsett (Pittsburgh) and Marcus Allen (Southern Cal).

"Colgate has moved the ball on everyone they have played this season," Jackson said. "We are going to have to stop Erenberg to win. He is running behind the biggest offensive line we've played against this year and he runs with power and breakaway speed."

Although running has been the most solid aspect of Colgates offense, their passing game has also enjoyed much success. Quarterback Steve Calabria has averaged 425.5 yards per game on offense, rushing for 255 yards and passing for 197.5 yards per game. Colgate head coach Fred Dunlap believes the combination of the running and passing games has been their strong point.

Dorsey named Defensive Player of the Year

Senior linebacker John Dorsey was named as "Defensive Player of the Year" in the Yankee Conference for the second consecutive year. Dorsey was one of seven UConn players named to the 1983 Yankee Conference First Team All-Star squad.

Dorsey was a unanimous choice for the first team. He enters his final collegiate game with 479 tackles (311 primary, 168 assists) for a 14.1 average in 34 games. He also recovered five fumbles, caused eight fumbles, intercepted three passes, totaled 23 running back tackles for losses and picked up 10 quarterback sacks. Dorsey has also blocked a field goal and an extra point and has been the team's leading tackler each of the past three seasons.

This season, Dorsey has totaled 168 tackles in 10 games.

three freshmen, Peter Freedman, Steve Daudela and Paul Beliveau comprise the fourth forward unit.

While freshmen are a large part of the team this season, there has been an atmosphere of both enthusiasm and dedication. One instance that stands out are the new hairstyles that the freshmen have sported for the opening of the season.

"The freshmen went out and got mohawk haircuts," Kirtland said. "I didn't endorse it, they just went out and did it as a group."

Home games may become a bit cold for the new hairstyles, but if it helps the Huskies make it to the playoffs, maybe coach Kirtland will be asking his barber for the new look come the end of February.

. . . seniors play season finale

"We don't throw as much as we used to, but we still like to use the pass," Dunlap said. "This is the best running team we've had here in years. Richie (Erenberg) has gained a lot of confidence and has made great improvements in his thinking on the field."

The Huskies will also have a few incentives of their own to win their final game. Senior placekicker Domingos Carlos enters the game needing three points to become the all-time leading scorer in UConn football history. Carlos has scored 165 points and trails the current leader, Vinny Clements (1968-70), by two points.

Sophomore Billy Parks needs 50 yards to become the third athlete in Husky football history to run for 1,000 yards in a single season.

Senior linebacker John Dorsey, a starter since his freshman year and a four-year lettermen, believes UConn will be ready for the game.

"Colgate is the most balanced team offensively that we will play," Dorsey said. "The game has a lot of meaning for all of us and we want to end with a winning season."

Dunlap is very optimistic of his teams chances against UConn and he wants to end the season on a positive note.

"I think UConn has a generally good team and one of the top defensive teams we've played," Dunlap said. "They have good personnel, especially on defense. Coach Jackson has done an excellent job in his first season."

Should the Huskies keep the momentum going against the Red Raiders, they would make this game memorable not only for the seniors, but for their fans as well.

Kirtland hoping for consistency, Huskies play opener

By Bob D'Aprile
Sports Editor

The open air rink remains one of the coldest places to watch a sporting event on campus, but faithful UConn fans still support their team.

The hockey team has a bright future ahead of itself.

Despite playing their home games in the open air rink, the Huskies have made the best of the situation and this season should be a team to be reckoned with in Division II hockey. Ben Kirtland, now in his third year as head coach, is optimistic that his team can improve upon last year's 10-14 record.

"A big difference this year has been the players' attitude," Kirtland said prior to UConn's season opener tonight against Westfield State. "We lacked consistency last year. If we can get some continuity we should be improved. I can only hope that we are competitive and consistent but that is easier said than done."

Although Kirtland would not commit himself to any predictions concerning the team's chances he has done everything to help the program improve to a point where it is in a position to qualify for the playoffs. This season the Huskies will be active during the winter break for the second straight year. UConn will play four games in Alaska, a place no UConn team has ever visited. In addition, the Merrimack tournament is also on the slate during the semester break.

"I think the trip to Alaska is a good opportunity for the kids," Kirtland said. "The games fit right in with our schedule. It will be the middle of winter when we're there and we'll be lucky if it's light outside four hours a day.

A hockey follower does not have to go far to find the strength on the UConn team this year. Although the Huskies may be inexperienced at the goalie positon, sophomore Peter Tache is scheduled to start against Westfield with Jamie Coleman as the backup, their strong point lies in the defensive corps.

Four defensemen return from last year in addition to senior Doug Stanley, who has been shifted to a forward position.

"Doug played forward all summer and since five players returned on defense I felt he could help more as a forward," Kirtland siad. "He can always go back to defense if we need him."

Juniors Jim Jamieson, Bob Falvey and Bruce Marshall along with sophomore Kevin Landry give the Huskies four experienced defensemen. Sophomore Jim Powers coupled with either Mike Pulaski or Jeff DeCost, both freshmen, provide Kirtland with some depth on defense.

On offense, two lines of nearly all freshmen will support two experienced groups. Junior Mike Anthony, junior Mark Kosinski and Stanley make up one veteran line with high scoring senior Brian Hitchings centering seniors Ken Hunt and Tim McCann on the other forward line.

Junior Jim Sasso joins freshmen Dave Kasper and Chris Tripp on another line while

Top field hockey teams to meet in Philadelphia

By Kim Harmon
Associate Sports Editor

The lights are up and the camera is almost ready to roll on the third annual NCAA Division I field hockey tournament. Showcased are the four best teams currently in the nation: UConn, Old Dominion, UMass, and Northwestern.

The cast of characters has changed a bit from last season's lineup. In the 1982 championships UConn, Old Dominion, Penn State and Delaware struggled for the title. UConn and Old Dominion appear to be the common faces around the trophy table each year.

But like someone once said, you can't tell the players without a program. The undefeated Huskies (18-0-2) are seeded first in the tournament. UConn won the NCAA Division I crown back in 1981 and then lost it last season. The Huskies will be trying to not only extend an unbeaten streak (27 of 28 games without a loss) but they will also be trying to recapture their lost title and bring it back to Storrs.

Trying to halt UConn in the semifinals will be Northwestern. The unseeded Wildcats play the Huskies at 6:30 p.m. Friday in Philadelphia. UConn has not played Northwestern this season but fans can be rest assured that the Wildcats will not receive a warm reception from the Huskies when both teams take the field.

And then there's UMass. Massachusetts is seeded third in the tournament and still remembers the tough tie (1-1) they fought for with the Huskies up in the cold and rain in Amherst, MA. Nov. 5. UMass has been a powerful Northeast rival of the Huskies and will undoubtedly be ready for any possible confrontations between the two teams. UMass will play the Old Dominion Lady Monarchs Friday at 8:30 p.m.

Ah yes, Old Dominion. Any field hockey fan in Storrs remembers the Lady Monarchs. Old Dominion is the same team that defeated UConn for the field hockey crown last season. The Huskies have a 1-0 victory over the Lady Monarchs to their credit this season but that won't be the thing that gives the UConn women their incentive should a rematch occur. The simple thought of the Lady Monarch's come-from-behind 3-2 win in the championship game last year, coupled with a 1-0 loss in regular season should be incentive enough.

The stage is set. The players are set. And the picks are in.

THE PICKS: in the semi-finals, Huskies 2, Northwestern 0; Old Dominion 4, UMass 1. The championship match final score? Huskies 3, Old Dominion 2. Just for a little bit of irony. The Huskies will win their second crown in the three year history of the NCAA tournament.

NBA names Stern as O'Brien's successor

NEW YORK (AP)—David J. Stern, the National Basketball Association's No. 2 man for the past three years, was unanimously chosen Tuesday by the league's owners to succeed the retiring Larry O'Brien as NBA commissioner.

The choice of Stern came less than a week after O'Brien announced he was stepping down when his term expired Feb. 1. It also came with the enthusiastic backing of O'Brien, who said, "I couldn't be more pleased."

"I love the people, I love the players," Stern said. "We have a very exciting non-stop game. We believe we have great players and solid owners. Our television ratings are up and our attendance is up. Our health is good."

Decker, four others chosen as All-Americans

COLORADO SPRINGS, CO — Five members of the field hockey team have been named First Team All-Americans by the United States Field Hockey Association.

Senior midfielder Laurie Decker, junior forwards Wendy Hug and Rose Smith, junior goalie Terry Kix, and sophomore midfielder Janet Ryan are the five UConn players named to the 1983 USA Field Hockey All-America First Team -- having been chosen from among all collegiate field hockey players in the nation by vote of coaches of member schools of USA Field Hockey.

A total of 16 First Team All-Americans were named with UConn being the only school to place more than three stars on the first unit.

Two other UConn field hockey players were also honored in the All-American balloting as senior sweeperback Cindy Dysenchuk was named to the All-America Second Team (16-member squad) and junior forward Lisa D'Amadio was named one of five All-American Honorable Mentions.

In all, 37 collegiate field hockey players from all three NCAA Divisions were recognized as All-Americans -- and UConn placed seven of its stars on that elite 37-memeber squad.
